Introduction and Rationale

As a part of the 5th Five Year Plan period, Government of India recognized the need for an independent agency which could act as an apex technical institution, both in the field of Health and Family Welfare. Consequently on March 9, 1977 the National Institute of Health and Family Welfare (NIHFV) came in to existence by the merger of two erstwhile autonomous organizations previously named as National Institute of Family Planning (NIFP) and National rvices as

Institute of Health Administration and Education (NIHAE) which were established in the year 1962 and 1964 respectively. NIHFW since then has been functioning as a multi-disciplinary Institute under the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare, Government of India.

NIHFW has been engaged in providing Education and Training to managerial physicians since last two decades through its regular courses of MD (CHA), DHA and other in service training programs. The Post Graduate Diploma in Public Health Management started in 2008-09 in collaboration with MOHFW has gained popularity nationwide. However the in service training arrangements have not been able to meet the demands expeditiously. Moreover, there is a need for continuous and consistent training in management especially for management of complex modern hospitals.

In order to facilitate continuous up gradation of knowledge and skills of various health personnel across the country, the NIHFW conducts the following courses through distance learning mode:

- (i) Diploma in Health and Family Welfare Management
- (ii) Diploma in Hospital Management
- (iii) Diploma in Health Promotion

2. About The Course

2.1. Background:

During the last five decades, India has made an unprecedented progress in the health sector and health indicators. Yet, a lot needs to be achieved towards controlling the communicable diseases, reducing infant mortality, maternal mortality and to raise the nutritional status of children and women. Further, the emerging challenge related to the lifestyle diseases/non-communicable diseases, requires the strategies different from the conventional ones, used to tackle communicable diseases. This challenge can be addressed through capacity building of the health personnel in initiating strong health promotional interventions to bring sustained change in the behaviour of the community in respect of risk factors.

In view of the above and to create adequate manpower, an alternative distance learning approach has been introduced by this institute, which is recognized by Distance Education Council.

The lifestyle diseases have a strong association with the way people live their lives. Such diseases have defied the conventional public health measures like environmental sanitation, immunization, vector control and many others. Health promotion strategies have been effective in prevention and control of these diseases as evident from the statistics from the developed countries. Some of the constraints realized by the government of India, in the framework of implementation of NRHM are:

- Lack of emphasis on locally and culturally appropriate health communication efforts.
- No community action and household surveys.

- No action on promoting healthy lifestyle whether it be fighting alcoholism or promoting tobacco control or promoting positive actions like sports, yoga, etc.
- Weak school health programmes.
- Absence of health counseling / early detection.
- Compartmentalized IEC of every scheme.

The framework has identified action for preventive and promotive health care as a key priority area.

2.2. The Diploma In Health Promotion:

Health promotion is the process of enabling people to increase control over the determinants of health and thereby improve their health. It represents a comprehensive social and political process, it not only embraces actions directed at strengthening the skills and capabilities of individuals, but also actions directed towards changing social, environmental and economic conditions so as to alleviate their impact on public and individual health.

Though health education has been an integral component of the National Health Programmes, the objective of health promotion activities is to go beyond sharing knowledge to developing skills and bringing about change in attitudes and bringing healthy practices in the community. As a first step, it is essential to communicate the latest and most accurate knowledge and information to the frontline health professionals and public at large.

As health promotion is a technical process of providing information and/or education to individuals, families and communities to make positive contribution to their health status, the participation of all sectors like Panchayati raj Institutions, Health, Education, Public Works Department, Ministry of Women and Child Development, etc. and also of youth groups, women groups, NGO's, corporate sectors and community is essential to sustain health promotion action.

Therefore, in order to build the capacity of frontline professionals in health promotion, the National Institute of Health and Family Welfare (NIHFW) is conducting the one year 'Diploma Course in Health Promotion' through distance learning. The aim of this course is to build the capacity of medical, paramedical, school teachers, counselors and other stakeholders concerned with the health of the society across the sectors in aspects related to health promotion. The trained personnel in health promotion would greatly help in reducing the double burden of communicable and non-communicable diseases in India, through management of lifestyles by promoting healthy diet, physical activity, stress management, reduction of tobacco / substance abuse and alcohol towards achieving healthy approach to life.

The professionals already engaged in public and private sectors would get an opportunity to develop specialization in the field of health promotion and thereby get benefit in their future endeavors. The Diploma in health promotion would benefit the health professionals, councillors, teachers, health managers in the NGO sectors by empowering them in planning, implementation of health promotion programmes in their respective settings.

7.1 Methodology

The Post Graduate Diploma course has been designed by using self-learning principle and learning by doing approach. The learning would be through self-study of the modules, assignments, case studies, and contact programmes.

There are total eleven basic modules and one practical module. To facilitate learning, each chapter in the module has been provided with specified learning objectives in the beginning. Detailed framework and concepts have also been given for the better understanding. The summing up and self-assessment exercises have been given at the end of the chapter for quick assessment by the learner.

Case studies have also been included at relevant points so as to relate the concepts with real situations.

The exercises have been developed so that the learners can apply the knowledge into workplace settings. These have been compiled into a practical module to facilitate learning and implementation of the concepts.

Development of project based on field level exercise is one of the major components of the course. The project work will be supported by duly identified mentors from NIHFV.
